Lockhart Power Company Donates $10,000 to SC Flood Relief

Lockhart, S.C. (October 7, 2015) – Lockhart Power Company is donating $10,000 to the American Red Cross of Central South Carolina to aid in the flood relief efforts in the Midlands area and across the state.

In addition to several renewable energy generating plants in the Upstate of SC, Lockhart Power manages and operates the Columbia Canal Hydroelectric Project on the Broad River, on behalf of the City of Columbia, S.C.

“Lockhart Power is a family-owned business, and our hope is that we can help support the many families that have been affected by these devastating floods throughout out state,” said Bryan Stone, chief operating officer of Lockhart Power. “A number of our associates who live in and around Lockhart and other small towns in this area are already donating through their local churches and other charitable organizations to help the families in Columbia who desperately need it. In addition, we’ve worked side-by-side with City and other governmental and utility employees, and we’re inspired by their dedication to the Midlands communities.”

Lockhart Power, which is owned by Pacolet Milliken Enterprises, strives to be a good corporate citizen by supporting the communities it serves as well as by protecting the environment.
